Do topics of race, ethnicity, social identity, power, privilege, oppression interest you?

If so, register for

INTS 4490—

Intergroup Dialogue on Race

What is INTS 4490—Intergroup Dialogue (IGD) on Race?

In this course (CRN—88227), students will participate in semi-structured face-to-face meetings across social identity groups. Students will discuss relevant reading material and will explore group experiences in various social and institutional contexts. Participants will examine narratives and historical, psychological, and sociological materials. Students will participate in exercises that will be debriefed in class and in weekly journals. Students will learn about pertinent issues facing the participating groups on campus and in society. The goal is to create a setting in which students engage in open and constructive dialogue, learning, and exploration concerning issues of intergroup relations, conflict, and community.

Who/What/When/Where?

This is a 3 credit, seven week—session two course (October 9 – December 10, 2018) meeting on Friday’s from 9:30am – 12:15pm in the Kennesaw Campus Library—Room 426.

Interested and want to register?

To register and/or for more information regarding this course, email Dr. Matthew K. Robison at matthew_robison@kennesaw.edu.